GLENDALE VISITORS IN YOSEMITE CHARMED WITH WONDERFUL SCENERY

Europe being closed to American tourists except the few who care to brave the dangers of mine infested waters and the chance of being sunk by a submarine, there are few places left for American tourist travel. Of course there is Hawaii and Japan; but then most practised tourists have "done" these places already. There is Southeastern Alaska; but that, too, has been visited since the war by many tourists. There is left for those who have not taken the trip the journey to Nome, which is only nine days from Seattle; but many people dread going into what they call the "Arctic" regions, although the summer there is as fine as a California summer and the day is 20 hours long with no darkness.

This summer the Yosemite seems to be the favorite touring ground of the Californians. There are numerous parties in the national park. Beginning July 2, Southern California week at Camp Curry, gave a registration of 361 people from Southern California. Before July 1 1276 cars entered the park. Of these 225 were Fords, 112 Cadillacs, 103 Buicks, Studebaker 94, Overland 91, Dodge 51, Hudson 44, Pierce-Arrow 42, Packard 38 and Hupmobile 26.

Mrs. C. H. Toll of Kenneth road writes to the Glendale Evening News from Camp Curry: Greetings from the Yosemite! This is a most soul-satisfying spot. I am sorry to leave it. Tomorrow morning we leave early for Lake Tahoe. That is another beauty spot I know better than Yosemite. Many Glendale people here.

"Very cordially yours,
"ELEANOR J. TOLL."

Mrs. M. O. Ryan, principal of the Broadway school, writes from Camp Curry: "Editor Glendale Evening News: This is certainly a grand place to spend a vacation. Quite a number of Glendale people here.

"MRS. M. O. RYAN."

All accounts tell of a cool summer and state that the water will be coming over the falls in vast volumes until winter closes down again. Many of the upper lakes are still full of ice which is melting, and will come down later. Some of the far back camps are not opened up yet. The Merced river is flowing twice as much water now as it usually does at this time of the year, according to David A. Curry, the "Stentor" of the Yosemite. Mr. Curry is one of the pioneers of Yosemite and his statements regarding water conditions are backed by eighteen years of experience.

In company with Prof. Frank Leverett of the University of Michigan and the U. S. Geological Survey, David Curry made several geological expeditions to points of interest in the park this week. The new material gathered by the experts will add to the value of the lectures on the geology of the Yosemite which Mr. Curry delivers several times a week at the camp.

YOUNG CAMPAIGNERS

Children, don't you want to help make California dry so it will be a safe place for you in physical, moral and efficient mental development as you grow up? You are all cordially invited to meet on Mrs. D. J. Graham's lawn, 235 E. Third street, Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Come and learn to be a soldier in the Young Campaigners against the worst foe our country can know. A nice young lady will speak to you about it. Mrs. John A. St. Clair and little Miss Patricia St. Clair and others will give pleasing readings. Caps and pennants will be provided for parades. Don't forget, all children are invited, Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

SIX HUNDRED ON WOOLWINE CAMPAIGN COMMITTEE

More than six hundred persons, representing every city and section of Los Angeles County, will be included in the general committee that will have charge of the campaign of Thomas Lee Woolwine, who is out to succeed himself for the office of District Attorney. The list, which was made public yesterday, shows a remarkable non-partisan organization. Men and women of every political faith and representing every class of endeavor are numbered in the committee that is to support District Attorney Woolwine at the primaries next August.

Work of organizing the county division of the executive committee is proceeding fast, and it is expected that announcement of its personnel will be made in a few days.

BY WHOSE AUTHORITY?

ANY MAN ELECTED TO OFFICE SHOULD FULFIL HIS OBLIGATIONS TO VOTERS

Two years ago the voters of California engaged in a very exciting campaign in the discussion of who should be elected governor for the next four years. The candidates were Governor Hiram Johnson, Progressive, and John D. Fredericks, Republican. At the November election the majority of the voters declared they wished Hiram Johnson to continue as governor for the ensuing four years. Now before he has served two years in the capacity of governor he takes a notion to aspire for the position of United States Senator, and it seems according to existing laws he is allowed to resign from the high position which he now holds and has the power to appoint a lieutenant who will upon Johnson's resignation before November become acting governor and continue to serve as governor until the expiration of the four year term for which Johnson was elected.

Now the question arises if Congressman W. D. Stevens had been a candidate for governor in 1914 would the people have chosen him in preference to other candidates? Does he know or does Governor Johnson know if the people of California really desire to have W. D. Stevens fill the position of governor? Mr. Stevens may be just the man for that position but it seems that the law is defective in some way when the governor is permitted to vacate his office without any good reason and is given the power to make an appointment for as long a period as two years. The power should not in such instances be taken from the hands of the people and it is only an honorable act on the part of the man who is elected to any office, whether it be Hiram Johnson as governor of the State or whether it be Congressman W. D. Stevens from his district, to serve in their respective offices until the expiration of the term for which they were elected. There might be some excuse for the governor's course at this time if there were to be an urgent demand from the people for him to become Senator, but as it is the demands come mainly from his personal, political aspirations and the advice of a few close political friends. If he is a quitter why may it not be possible that he will, if elected United States Senator, give up his job for something that he thinks will suit him a little better than serving as Senator.

The Evening News has had a very high regard for Governor Johnson, also for Congressman Stevens, and it is not against the qualifications of these men that we make any protest. It is against the method they have of taking the power of resigning and making appointments to suit themselves, into their own hands.

DEATH OF E. P. TRESSLAR

Elkanah P. Tresslar, the well-known photographer, of 607 N. Brand boulevard, died Tuesday afternoon, at 5 o'clock, in the Clara Barton hospital, Los Angeles, after a serious operation. Mr. Tresslar had been acutely ill for 10 days before his death. It is believed that his trouble was the result of a very bad fall from his bicycle two years ago, when he sustained quite painful internal injuries.

Mr. Tresslar was born Feb. 1, 1847, at Franklin, Ind. He left that state when about 17 years of age, and went to Fort Scott, Kansas. He lived in Kansas until 1891, when he came to Los Angeles. In 1912 he settled in Tropico and resided there until the time of his death.

He leaves a widow, Mrs. Jennie Tresslar, and three daughters, Mrs. W. B. Wooldridge of San Francisco, Mrs. E. H. Cordary of Los Angeles and Mrs. O. L. Olshausen of 311 N. Glendale avenue, Tropico.

The funeral will be held Thursday at 2 p. m. at the undertaking parlors of Faris and Carmichael, Tenth and Flower streets, Los Angeles. The funeral will be in charge of Unity Lodge, No. 368, F. & A. M., of which Mr. Tresslar was a member. The brethren of the lodge will assemble at 1 p. m., at the local temple on Brand boulevard, where autos will be waiting to carry them to Los Angeles.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

In addition to the regular topic for discussion, Miss Jennie Horsch, who has just returned from the great Missionary conference in New York, will give a partial report of this great gathering. It is hoped that a large number of members of the church and congregation will attend.

GRENADE BATTLE NORTHWEST OF THE MAIN CENTER OF THE FORTRESS SECTION REPELS GERMANS

(Special Service to Glendale Evening News)

PARIS, July 19.—There has been sharp fighting at all points along the Verdun section. The Germans appear to have lost some of their initiative power since the combined Allies' attack on the Picardy front. The battle fought this morning was a grenade affair in which the French are easily the superior of the Germans. Several German advanced trenches were taken.

(Special Service to Glendale Evening News)

BOSTON, July 19.—Dr. Eldridge Atwood of Woburn, who shot Dr. Wilfred E. Harris, in the Hotel Westminster, on account of his relations with his sweetheart, Dr. Celia P. Adams of Brookline, who committed suicide by taking morphine, was arraigned in the municipal court here this afternoon on a charge of attempted murder. He confessed that he shot Dr. Harris because he had betrayed Dr. Adams. The three physicians were osteopaths and Dr. Harris was president of the Massachusetts College of Osteopathy in Cambridge.

BRITISH FIRE HALF-MILLION SHELLS DAILY

LONDON, July 19.—Half-a-million shells daily, since June 27, have been hurled against the German lines. The supply is unlimited and the British are prepared to keep up the attack on the same scale for an indefinite time. Official reports state that the British have used up a total of ten-and-a-half million shells since the opening of the offensive.

APPEAL TO DAD

MRS. DE WITT WHEELER PUTS PROHIBITION STRONGLY BEFORE FATHERS

It was an appeal to "Dad." This isn't all, but that is the big outstanding feature of last night's meeting at the Union High School auditorium. It was a recital; for a talented elocutionist favored a large number of Glendale's best citizens with readings, recitations and impersonations. It was an entertainment of the highest order for there was not a dry moment during the time. Two solos, "Island of Dreams," by Adams, and "The Star," by Rodgers, sung by Dr. P. O. Lucas of Tropico, with Mrs. Grace Scholes as accompanist, added to the enjoyment and interest of the program.

But primarily the purpose of the meeting was to appeal to the mankind and the womankind of Glendale and vicinity, and to solicit their support in "the greatest and most far-reaching campaign the State and nation have ever known." Facts and figures of interest to every citizen were presented by Dr. Guy Wadsworth of the California Campaign Federation. He sounded in ringing tones the slogan:

"Amendments 1 and 2—Vote 'yes' on both."

He said it might surprise the good people of Glendale to learn that in the 1914 election of 3838 registered voters, there were 728 who did not vote. There were 175 others who failed to vote "wet" or "dry," but about two-thirds of the remainder voted dry. A big majority, a splendid majority; but not big enough. Direct appeal was made to voters in clean, dry towns, to do their duty in off-setting the votes of the great, wet cities. "Our job this year," said the speaker, is a big man's job, a good woman's job, demanding the best there is in us, and all there is in us."

The chief speaker of the evening, Mrs. Frank Wheeler, superintendent of the Women's Department of the California Campaign Federation, was then introduced by the chairman, Mr. James F. McBryde, president of the Glendale Campaign Federation.

During the course of Mrs. Wheeler's remarks, smiles were followed by bursts of laughter and hand-clapping. These in turn were followed by sobered faces, knitted brows and tearful eyes. All the advertised features of the program were very much in evidence, and the influences of the meeting will doubtless crystallize temperance sentiments into aggressive action.

"Nineteen dry states now in the list; five or six to vote this year on this proposition. Alaska to have a straw vote. Bright prospects that in other ways the temperance issue will be presented to the people as it has never been before. California the storm center of the entire campaign, with the certainty that our victory will go far toward settling the question of a dry nation in the near future. California, with over 17,000 federal liquor licenses, nearly four hundred more than the total held in the last eleven states to go dry. Certainly a job big enough for even the California Campaign Federation in whose ranks members of all denominations and temperance organizations are fighting shoulder to shoulder.

"You know how we, of Southern California, wrapped our robes of righteousness about us in 1914, trying to make ourselves believe we had done our whole duty. But did we? Only 48 per cent, please note that, of the dry vote came from south of Tehachapi. And 52 per cent from the north. It must not be that way this time. Our vote down here must more than offset that of the big, wet, bay cities."

But the most impressive feature was the direct, impelling, personal appeal made by the speaker to "dad," to papa, the boy's ideal, the girl's hero. "Every year," she said, "the liquor monster demands a hundred thousand boys, sixty thousand girls—human sacrifices. Father, have you a boy to spare, a girl to cast into the pit? No! Well then some other father must furnish two. Is it fair? I appeal to your manhood, your fatherhood, your sense of honor and your sense of right. Is it fair? Answer by your work between now and election, and by your vote."

For the first time public announcement was made of the organization of the Glendale branch federation. For some weeks past, earnest men and women have been laboring to perfect this organization, and it may now be said to be "booted and spurred and ready to ride." As in all the Federation work, the plan is to include representatives of all temperance organizations and all religious denominations, and the list of officers and committee members indicate the strength and backing of the movement.

The members of the Executive Committee are: Mr. James F. McBryde, president; Mrs. Ruby J. Smart, vice-president; Mr. C. D. Lusby, treasurer; Mrs. Albert Frank, secretary. Chairman of the committee on Public Meetings, Mr. J. N. McGillis; Publicity, Mr. Clyde Lowry. All resident ordained ministers of the gospel are members of the Executive committee.

Detailed reports will appear later in these columns of the further plans and work of the organization. —Clyde Lowry.

BACK FROM MEXICO

JACK MORGAN OF SONORA TELLS OF CONDITIONS IN THE SOUTHERN REPUBLIC

Jack Morgan, of Sunset, Sonora, a small town about thirty miles from Chihuahua, is in Glendale visiting some of his friends. He is on his way to Baldwin Park, where he will remain to wait the turn of events in Mexico. He has a 2000-acre ranch near Sunset. On this acreage he discovered a promising gold mine. Considerable development work has been done on the mine, which is just beginning to be remunerative.

Mining work, Mr. Morgan has varied with cattle raising and general farming. Everything went well until the recent development of trouble between Villa and Carranza. Villa was in Sunset nine months ago. He had about 80 men with him and the roving bands of Villistas and Carranzistas kept coming and going.

"When I left," said Mr. Morgan, "there was a band of Villistas camped on my ranch. I had stayed in Mexico as long as I could. I perceived that I had outstayed my welcome so I resolved that as the present government of the United States refused to protect its citizens in Mexico and ordered them to come out of that country that I would obey orders. I left my ranch, which was in fine condition after years of hard labor, to the mercy of the troops. My partner had left some time ago. What condition our property will be in when we get back we do not like to imagine.

"It is the common belief in Mexico that Villa went to South America some time ago, to await the turn in events. Carranza is not popular. Villa is the idol of the nation with the exception of the little bunch of capitalists and exploiters. It is thought that Villa left someone who resembles him slightly to impersonate him during his absence. I left my ranch Friday last week and took the train to Mexicali on the border. Thence I went by train to San Diego.

"It is generally believed that the big American mining interests in Mexico, the oil interests and the American holders of large tracts of land are urging on the war in the hope that annexation will come, when they can further exploit the country. The small rancher, like myself, wants no war. We have always got on well with the Mexicans, who are in many ways a fine people and a kindly race.

"The country is in a horrible condition. The war has destroyed the farming work. Farmers will not grow crops merely to see them seized by the roving bands of both parties. There were practically no crops last year worth speaking of. The cattle have disappeared to a great extent. It looks as though the war would have to stop from the sheer inability of the generals to feed their armies.

"It is my belief that the war would stop very quickly if the newspapers of both countries would cease inflaming the two countries against each other. I hope to go back to my ranch again. I love that country. Its soil is fertile. It is the most highly mineralized country in the world. The mountains are full of ore of all kinds. It is a rich gold country. Its valleys are excellently suited for agricultural purposes. I am going to Baldwin Park to stay some time with friends and my future plans will depend greatly on the course of events in Mexico.

GLENDALE, CALIFORNIA, WEDNESDAY, JULY 19, 1916

DEVELOPMENT OF AIR SERVICE

Among the developments of the war are the many new kinds of aeroplanes and the promise for the future of aeroplanes that will carry small cannon and dirigibles that will carry cargo across the Atlantic. At present the air front above the combating armies is black with the different airships. The French and English must have between them about 1000 aeroplanes in constant service. Through their activity they have driven off the German air scouts and made it quite difficult for the Teutons to do any sighting for their guns.

Every day sees some advance in aviation in this war. The French and the Germans started out with a good lead over all the other nations, but the British with their extensive manufacturing facilities have caught up on both. Between them the French and British outnumber the Germans in aeroplanes. This superiority is becoming more marked every day. The German Zeppelin has done nothing in this war to justify its cost. Beyond killing about 1100 women, children and non-combatants in England and damaging a few old houses the only effect produced by the Zeppelin raids has been to exasperate and stir up the phlegmatic British temperament.

The consequence has been that the British have turned out a very creditable fleet of aeroplanes. Their aviators are daring and successful. We read of them descending in recent battles to within 300 yards of the German forces and dropping bombs. The French are equally daring and brilliant in all their maneuvers. They have been specially successful in preventing Zeppelin raids on Paris. One of the French aviators having exhausted his bombs dropped his aeroplane directly on the top of a Zeppelin and died in the explosion that destroyed the German air craft.

Now it is stated that aeroplane armies are to be the next development. The battle plane carrying five or six men is already a reality. So the world is likely to see enormous fleets of aeroplanes battling in the air before long. It is reported that already the nations are preparing to manufacture aeroplanes on a very large scale and in great numbers and the aeroplane armies will then become prominent features of the great war.

It should be possible to construct aeroplanes that would carry, say ten men each. One thousand aeroplanes thus loaded could carry 10,000 men to the back of any position and thus render wire entanglements of no avail. Expert attention is being devoted to this branch of military progress at the present moment.

There is also quite a deal of attention being devoted to the question of transporting guns and ammunition by air. This is a matter of extreme importance. Aeroplanes are being used that can carry a 500-pound bomb and they are so safe and steady that when the bomb is dropped the pilot does not note any lightening of the load. To be able to transport light cannon in this way from one part of the line to another would be a tremendous advantage and it is safe to prophesy that this will be done before long.

Before the war closes it is likely that the world will see what has been forecast by H. G. Wells in his remarkable novels—clouds of aeroplanes darkening the sky in every direction. The navies of the air will tack and maneuver and the clash of the flying squadrons will be like nothing that has preceded it. The huge transport of commerce will float across the Atlantic and the Pacific and the age of aerial domination will have begun.

MINOR INFLUENCES OF LIFE

No one is without influence in this world. In the natural world one cannot move even so much as a pebble on the ocean beach without altering in a degree that could be measured the center of gravity of the earth. Even the most apparently non-influential being exercises a perceptible influence in some direction. That influence if rightly directed might become a power for good. Everyone cannot be eminent and yet everyone can be useful. In the end usefulness is as valuable a quality as eminence.

If a man or a woman will only determine to be himself or herself and try to be or to imitate someone else much good would result to the world. Imitations are always commonplace. Originality is of more value. To be oneself! "Let me be the thing I seem." That is one of the greatest accomplishments in this world. To be just, to be honest, to be of good report, to be reliable, to be natural—these are qualities that are much more rare than one would imagine. To find a man who is himself, through all the vicissitudes of life is quite as difficult as the task Diogenes set himself—to find "a man."

No person is without influence. Everyone should make the most of what they have. If one cannot grasp that which is most desirable let them at least hold to that which is within their fingers' touch. There are not any two blades of grass alike in this world. Examine them through a microscope and you will perceive minute differences in vein and coloring and in fibre. There are no two persons exactly alike physically. There may be wonderful resemblances but these are always differences.

Everyone has faults and failings; everyone commits errors and is guilty of backslidings, but those are all their own and no one else is likely to claim them. In similar fashion everyone has excellencies that none else can share much as they might like to do so. Let the world know of these excellencies. If you cannot be a poet of the first magnitude cease writing bad verses and become a good merchant. If you cannot go to a university and learn the higher knowledge and languages at least learn your own language. The sun shines alike on all and you can have your share if you will not shut it out. If you cannot have a rose farm like some people in Glendale you can always have a rose out of it and enjoy its fragrance and beauty.

One feature of American military possibilities has usually been overlooked in the talk about this country's inefficiency in the field—that is, the fact that there are 70 American aviators in the service of France, receiving priceless training, which would be immediately available for this country in the event of war with Mexico or any other country. These men have been in the heat of the fighting and are skilled and expert beyond ordinary measure. It is also practically certain that France would release them in case of this country's need. There are also 875 Americans in the French Foreign legion. These men come from practically every state in the Union. On the release of all these men the United States would have the nucleus of a first-class air service and an incomparable number of men fit for the office of training the citizen soldier of the United States his modern drill and field tactics. The fact that these men are available is certain to have a profound effect on the training of the future armies of this country. War is in the atmosphere of the world which is charged with it as with electricity.

BOTH SIDES SHOULD AVOID EXAGGERATION

In the very heated discussions that are now going on between the liquor interest and the anti-saloon faction, care should be taken to avoid exaggerations by both factions in the fight. Anti-saloon advocates have too good a cause to represent to make it necessary for them to exaggerate as to the number of people who die yearly from the effects of alcoholic drinks and the intense suffering that is brought about from the influence of the saloon. Upon looking at the question from a radical standpoint it would seem that the saloon is the cause of almost every existing misery but the man who is not a radical can readily understand that intemperance may be practiced in hundreds of ways other than by the use of alcoholic drinks.

People are intemperate in all forms of eating, and the non-radical man knows that much of the misery in this world is brought about on account of overeating. Even people who are strongly opposed to the use of alcoholic drinks bear evidence in their features that they are intemperate in eating.

It is readily observed by the general public that advocates of the saloon are defeating their cause by misrepresentation. These advocates are putting out fine art work imploring the voters to save the grape gardens, when it is the saloon business they really wish to save. What the saloon man thinks is coming argument is understood only too well to be real misrepresentation.

RESPONSIBILITY OF COMMITTEES

The appointment of committees has become so common that it is the habit of many members of committees to shirk responsibility. At the time of appointment it may be in their minds that the duties devolving upon the committee appointed will be attended to by them but there is on the part of so many people a tendency to neglect meeting with the other members of the committee and when it comes to the time of making reports to the organization making the appointment they have no report prepared, notwithstanding the function of the committee on which they have been appointed to serve is of great importance.

THE COUNTRY WALK

There is nothing better than a good long walk in the fresh air along country roads to make one feel the vigor of health and the real joy of living. There is no better way of getting close to nature than by walking. A close study of trees, flowers and fields is possible only on foot, and is the only satisfactory way of learning these things. It is in large measure due to the habits of walking that our ancestors enjoyed such vigorous health and clear perceptions. It is an exercise and a pleasure in which all can engage, old and young, rich and poor alike, and it will repay one just in proportion to the energy and good sense which he uses in its practice.—A Gibbs.

ELECTRIC ENGINES SUPERIOR

Some extraordinary results of the electrification of a part of Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad, through the Rockies and the Bitter Root Mountains, are noted in the report of the president. Nine electric engines are now doing the work formerly done by twenty-four steam engines, at an estimated reduction in expense of from ten to thirteen cents per 1,000 tons per mile.

Last winter gave electrification on the St. Paul system an exceedingly severe test, as it was the bitterest winter in the memory of railroad men in the West. There were times when every steam locomotive in the Rocky Mountain district, was frozen, but the electric locomotives went right along without mishap.

One impulse from a vernal wood
May teach you more of man,
Of moral evil and of good,

—Wordsworth.

Now nature is not at variance with art, nor art with nature, they both being servants of his providence; art is the perfection of nature; were the world now as it was the sixth day, these were yet a chaos; nature hath made another world, and art another. In brief, all things are artificial; for nature is the art of God.—Sir Thomas Browne.

Our purity of taste is best tested by its universality. If we can only admire this thing or that, we may be sure that our cause for liking is of a finite and false nature. But if we can perceive beauty in everything of God's doing, we may argue that we have reached the true perception of its universal laws.—Ruskin.

COLD AIR OVER EQUATOR

Winds blow not merely along the surface of the earth, but upward and downward throughout the atmosphere. It will whirl about in all directions. Accordingly it is impossible to construct a weather chart that will really show the direction of the winds. Prof. Alexander McAdie, of Harvard University, describes some of the recent experiments in the upper air performed by balloons.

It has been discovered that the coldest air, high up, is to be found over the equator. Prof. McAdie writes: "At the equator as we rise in the air, the temperature continues to fall to a much faser degree than in temperate latitudes."

ELEPHANT BUTTE DAM

Work was completed recently on the Elephant Butte Dam, a United States reclamation project, which, by backing the Rio Grande River, forms the greatest storage reservoir in the world. Construction began five years ago. The reservoir will feed an irrigation system that waters 185,000 acres of land in New Mexico, Texas, and Mexico.

The Dam blocks a canyon of the Rio Grande 120 miles north of El Paso. It is one of the Government's five big irrigation projects, and will store the entire flow and flood of the river. The reservoir will hold 115,000,000,000 cubic feet of water, which experts say would cover the State of Delaware to a depth of two feet throughout its entire length and breadth.

The Dam stands 301 feet high and is 1,674 feet long. It provides a roadway across the canyon seventeen feet wide and at its base is 235 feet thick.

FLANDERS-FRANK WEDDING

A pretty home wedding was that of Miss May Flanders, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Flanders, of 4128 Sequoia, and W. D. Frank, who is employed in the printing department of the Western Drug company of Los Angeles, Monday evening, at the home of the bride. The Rev. Don S. Ford of the Tropico Methodist Episcopal church solemnized the marriage, using the ring ceremony. The bride was attired in gray silk. The bride's sister, Mrs. Warren King, was the matron of honor. Noble Ripley, the bridegroom's chum, was best man. The bride has always been an active member of the local Methodist-Episcopal church and a very active member of the Philathea society. The bridegroom is a well-known member of the Tropico fire department and a past chief official of the Knights of Pythias.

At the conclusion of the marriage ceremony the whole party proceeded to the home of Mrs. Ripley, La Brea court, where a wedding breakfast had been prepared. After a very pleasant time the bride and groom left for their home at 516 W. Cypress avenue.

TROPICO TRUSTEES' MEETING

The Tropico Board of Trustees met in regular session Tuesday evening at the city hall at 7:30 p. m., with President Frank E. Peters, Fred A. Alspach, Chas. H. Henry and Walter C. Seal and A. C. Boyce present. The following city officers were also present: Margaret R. Coleman, clerk; Hartley Shaw, city attorney; I. C. Wasson, street superintendent; J. W. Gould, city marshal, and Dr. W. C. Mabry, health officer.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

A communication was received from R. L. Holland in behalf of Mrs. A. P. Jackson in regard to an assessment against her property on Acacia street, in which she asked the board to remit the penalty on said assessment and if possible make other concessions, as she was not able to pay the amount. The clerk was instructed to notify him that Mrs. Jackson's property had been sold and she would have to make her settlement with the purchasers.

A communication was received from Mr. Shillings of Burbank asking an extension of 60 days in which to complete the improvement of Adams street and Moore avenue, stating that he was having some difficulty in securing the proper kind of stone to be used. On motion he was granted an extension of thirty days in which to complete the contract.

The city attorney reported that he had taken the matter up with the Southern Pacific in regard to obtaining an easement across their tracks at Brand boulevard and the removing of the signal tower at that point and that he had received a copy of the agreement to be signed by the board in which the city of Tropico agrees to pay all expenses incurred by the railroad company in the moving of the tower, etc. After some discussion the board authorized the president of the board and the city clerk to execute the contract and forward it to the company for their signatures. In issuing the order for the crossing the Railroad Commission had designated that the work should be completed before August 1st, 1916, and as the matter had been delayed the city attorney was instructed to ask the commission for an extension of 6 months.

The president of the board reported that he had seen Mr. Young in regard to the deeding of certain property along Columbus avenue for street purposes and that Mr. Young refused to make the deed stating that owing to the financial situation he did not think it advisable to open and improve Columbus avenue at this time. The board is waiting the action of other property owners to present the proper petition asking that said improvements be made so that they may bring condemnation proceedings to acquire the necessary right of way.

The president asked if there was any one present who protested the improvement of Acacia avenue between Brand and Central avenue, but before any one had time to make a protest the board was informed by the city attorney that the street notices had not been posted in time and it would be necessary to go through the entire procedure again. The board then rescinded all previous proceedings and adopted Resolution of Intention No. 222 for the opening and improvement of Acacia street between Brand boulevard and Central avenue and ordered the same to be published in the Tropico Sentinel two times in accordance with the law.

A petition, signed by several property owners along Acacia street, asking the board to appoint Mr. H. W. Bullis as inspector over the improvement of Acacia street, was read. On motion the petition was ordered placed on file.

The matter of "clean-up week" came up for discussion and after due consideration the board designated from July 29 to August 4 as "Clean-up Week," and urges every citizen of Tropico to assist in this much needed work and urged that the Glendale News and the Tropico Sentinel give due publicity for the same.

The following claims were allowed and ordered paid:

Municipal Securities Co.	$16.65
A. Carlisle & Co.	35.70
Chas. Fishel	7.50
P. E. Kitchen	26.25
Tropico Sentinel	30.80

GLENDALE FOOTHILLS

Considerable activity continues to be manifested along the district which is traversed by the recently graded and paved thoroughfare, N. Sixth street. Real estate agents are constantly on the ground and rumors of impending deals are plentiful. The thirty-acre ranch belonging to Mr. C. E. Bobertz, better known to residents here as George M. Taylor's place, on Pacific avenue and N. Sixth street, is to be sold. This was one of the finest ranches in this district. It is to be divided into half-acre and acre lots. It is probable that the price of the half-acre lots will be $1250.

Miss Toll and Miss Louise Toll are spending ten days at the home of their brother, Charles H. Toll, Kenneth road. They are having a most enjoyable time exploring the wonders of the foothills. Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Toll and their family have been visiting the Yosemite and are now on their way to Lake Tahoe.

Mr. and Mrs. Ashby of North Sixth street are erecting a fine 11-room house on their property on that improved boulevard. They are also intending to build two more similar houses.

Mrs. Frank D. Owen of Los Angeles was a visitor at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Connors, 1662 Kenneth road, Sunday. The party took lunch at the Casa Verdugo restaurant.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Colby of Kenneth road spent Sunday afternoon as visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. Manard, 325 West Forty-ninth street, Los Angeles.

Mrs. J. Gray of Los Angeles is paying a ten days' visit at the Drohan ranch, Kenneth road.

TEMPERANCE AND MISSIONS

Mrs. Frank De Witt Wheeler, Superintendent of Women's work in Southern California, was the speaker at the regular meeting of the Presbyterian Missionary Society, Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. Wheeler spoke on "The Relation of Temperance to Missions." She said that the greatest enemy of mission work in all the cities was the liquor traffic and the foe that liquor traffic detested and feared was the missionary societies. The societies were at work all the time. They were never idle. There were continually rousing the public conscience and creating strong Christian sentiment against the liquor traffic. In the campaign against the traffic the missionaries would be a mighty aid. She told of the missionary work done all over the world and how beneficial it was in combatting the evils created by the liquor traffic.

Mrs. Adams, president of the society, presided. The church was well filled and the greatest enthusiasm prevailed. While the meeting was the regular function of the Presbyterian society, members from other churches had been invited and representatives from every church in the city were present.

Mrs. Ruby J. Smart, president of the Glendale Union (W. C. T. U.) offered the following resolution which was unanimously adopted: Any person or corporation that shall knowingly consign, export or transport any rum or other intoxicating drink from the United States to any State, Province or district of Africa, or shall in any way participate knowingly in such consignment, exportation or transportation, shall be punishable by a fine of not less than $50, and not more than $1000 for each and every original package so consigned, exported or transported; and liquors so consigned, exported or transported shall also be forfeited.

Sec. 2. That this act shall take effect three months after it is approved by the president.

To U. S. Senate and House of Representatives:

Undersigned organizations and individuals hereby petition for prompt enactment of Gillet Bill H. R. 10924, to prohibit exports of New England rum and other intoxicants to Africa.

Endorsed by 350 voters of Glendale missionary societies.

(Signed) MRS. F. J. ADAMS,
President Presbyterian Society.
MRS. J. J. HESSE,
Secretary Presbyterian Society.

Dr. Lucas sang several solos in a beautifully flexible and clear tenor voice throughout the afternoon.

BIRTHDAY LUNCHEON

Mrs. M. Ewell Smith of Los Angeles was complimented today, which is her birthday, by an elaborate surprise birthday luncheon planned by her daughter, Mrs. Mattison B. Jones and held at the home of Mrs. Jones, 106 Orange street. The beautifully appointed table with its decorations of red and white was set in the palm covered arbor and the delightful luncheon was doubly enjoyable by being served in the open air. Covers were laid for Mrs. Lucius A. Phillips and daughters, Misses Geraldine and Annie Ewell of Los Angeles, Mrs. W. E. Evans and daughter Katherine, Mrs. F. W. Pigg and Billy, Dudley and Miss Maybeth Pigg, Mrs. Jones, the hostess and her daughter, Miss Winifred, and the guest of honor.

Following the luncheon the guests were entertained with songs to the accompaniment of the ukulele by Misses Maybeth Pig and Winifred Jones.

A LA CRESCENTA ENTERPRISE

F. J. Henry, who resides on Arden avenue, North Glendale, and S. W. Brown of La Crescenta, are the proprietors and managers of a very worthy enterprise located in La Crescenta on Los Angeles avenue near Montrose avenue. This enterprise consists of a modern equipped bottling works, at which temperance drinks are bottled and wholesaled. The building is a new one, having been erected less than two months ago. The dimensions are 25 by 40 feet, 2 stories high; the floor is of cement and the walls and ceilings have a hard plaster finish. Installed in the building are machines of the most modern type used in manufacturing soda water and pop. The water used in preparing these drinks comes from the mountains and for purity surpasses any other water that might be obtained in Southern California. Before this water is used, however, it passes through the most modern-constructed filter that removes from it any impurities that might exist. There is installed a very modern bottle-filling machine and also a power bottle washer. Flavors used are the purest and best that can be obtained and the syrup is prepared from confectioner's A sugar, also the best obtainable.

The machinery is all new and is operated by individual motors. The construction of the building, the arrangement of the machinery and the ingredients used are all indicative of the extremely sanitary conditions of the plant. Mr. Henry and Mr. Brown are substantial business men who are interested in the upbuilding of the La Crescenta and Glendale communities. They have been buying from local dealers so far as possible and now is is only just and right that local dealers who sell temperance drinks should so far as possible place orders for bottled goods with these gentlemen. A visit to this well equipped plant will convince anyone that it is conducted in an entirely sanitary and business-like manner.

GLENDALE CLUB FAMED IN MISSOURI

The fame of the Bird and Flower club of Glendale has reached St. Louis, Missouri, from which city comes a request for admission into the club as an active but absent member. Bert Barlow, a little fellow of four, has heard of the lovely times the members of the Bird and Flower club enjoy; he longs with all his heart to join the young people on their trips, and to learn about the birds and flowers. So he asks to become a member; he wants a membership card and a membership button. The mother and Bert will take weekly trips and pretend the whole Bird and Flower club is with them. Once a month the mother will write a letter to the club, telling of the trips, and describing what Bert has seen and learned.

This afternoon, at the weekly meeting of the club, little Bert Barlow will become a valued member; and though so far away from California, every member of the club will welcome and love this little boy.

A JAPANESE POETICAL CRITICISM

"My Japanese opinion, shaped by hereditary impulse and education, was terribly shattered, quite many years ago, when Edwin Markham's 'The Man With the Hoe' made a furore in the American press," writes Yone Noguchi. "I exclaimed: 'What! You say it is poetry? How is it possible? It appeared to me to be a cry from the socialistic platform rather than a poem; I hope I do not offend the author if I say that it was the American journalist whose mind of curiosity always turns, to use a Japanese expression, to making billows rise from the ground. Putting aside many things, I think I can say that Mr. Markham's poem has an inexcusable error to the Japanese mind; that is its exaggeration, which above all, we cannot stand in poetry, and even despise as very bad taste.

"Before Edwin Markham there was Whittier, who sent out editorial volleys under the guise of poetry; it is not too much to say, I dare think, that 'An American Anthology' by Mr. Stedman, would look certainly better if it were reduced to one hundred pages from its eight hundred; we are bewildered to see so many poet-journalists perfectly jammed into its pages. One cannot act contrary to education; we are more or less the creatures of tradition and circumstance. It was the strength of the old Western poets, particularly the Americans, that they preached, theorized and moralized, besides singing, in their own days."

"We treat poetry, though it may sound too ambitious to the Western mind, from the point of its use or uselessness; it rises, through a mysterious way, to the height of its peculiar worth, where its uselessness turns to usefulness. When one knows that the things useless are things most useful under different circumstances (to give one example, a little stone lazy by a stream, which becomes important when you happen to hear its sermon), he will see that the aspect of uselessness in poetry is to be doubly valued since its usefulness is always born from it."

NEW LUNA VEILS

By MARGARET MASON

Lovely moonfaced maiden
In your Luna veil
The moon of you is jealous
And turns with envy pale.

If John Armstrong Chalmer should ask "Who's Luney now?" we should all have to answer "We all are simply luney over the new Luna veils." They go to greater lengths in the original veil lines than anything we have been offered for many months. Of two and a half yard lengths of hemstitched chiffon, the Luna veil has an inset of exquisite lace veiling, either white or black, round as the full moon and about half a yard in diameter. This is for your face to peep seductively through while the rest of the chiffon folds swathe your head and throat in gracious and diaphanous manner.

Not in a blue moon have you seen anything so lovely as a Luna veil of azure chiffon inset with black lace. A white one with a black inset is striking and one yellow as Luna herself has a black lace opening also, while a wonderful rose shade has either black or white to choose from.

These veils are worn not only for motoring but unusually are adapted for moonlight night wear or even on those nights when Diana hides her face in pouting jealousy of Earth's fair daughters. They really are intended for any dress occasion when one goes unhatted. The lace disk is worn over the face while the chiffon protects the coiffure and acts also as a scarf around your throat and bare shoulders.

A new veil for motoring exclusively comes in the most vivid shades of chiffon and is three yards long. It has an elastic sewed in a circle over your motor hat and forms a puff of veiling over the crown while part of the width falls over the front of the face and the other in the back. The long ends are then knotted under your chin and allowed to float in the breeze and if you choose to sit in the front they may incidentally get all tangled up in the steering wheel.

Following the fad for stripes there are also chiffon veils of white, striped widely in either blue, rose, green, yellow or mauve. On the face of things veils continue fine, of mesh with delicate lace borders or all over traceries. Because of the huge dimensions of this season's favorite hat the face veil is of a necessity put on first, next to the head and under the chapeau. Alas, it is oft too true that most of us have nothing else under our hats but our veils.

A little girl of four years, having written a letter consisting simply of waving lines, asked her father to mail it.

"What did you say?" asked father.

"I don't know," said Rosamond.

"Why, you wrote it!" exclaimed father.

"Yes, but I did not read it," was the innocent answer.—Youth's Companion.

Our times of greatest pleasure are when we have won some higher peak of difficulty, trodden under foot some evil, and felt day by day so sure a growth of moral strength within us that we cannot conceive of an end of growth.—Stopford Brooke.

LARGE CITRUS CROP

Horticultural Commissioner Geo. P. Weldon of the State of California has just issued a report covering crop prospects for the coming season. The report is based on complete investigation made by commissioners all over the State and from other information. According to this report a large citrus crop is expected this year.

Olives will be short by a considerable figure. The shortage is due largely to a poor set of fruit because of cold weather during the blooming period. In Butte county, the largest olive producing county of the State, it is estimated that only 25 per cent of a crop will be produced. Los Angeles and Riverside counties, other large producers, will have about 80 per cent each.

The almond crop will not be up to the average, the estimates ranging about or below 50 per cent of normal. The walnut crop estimate, however, is placed by Weldon at 100 per cent.

In practically all of the citrus counties the grapefruit crop is estimated at 100 per cent.

A peculiar accident occurred in Monrovia the other day when a large steam road roller was destroyed or rather destroyed itself. The roller smashed a gas main, freeing illuminating gas that was ignited from the engine fire. The burning gas made it impossible to run the engine out of danger and before the gas could be turned off all the combustible parts of the machine were burned to ashes. The engineer was slightly burned before he could jump from his seat.

APHORISMS ON WOMEN

Mrs. Havelock Ellis, the English author and suffragist, in writing of the woman of today, uses the following pointed phrases in regard to feminine progress:

"Women must be quick to use the chances that are hers, in order to gain others that are not as yet hers.

"The well-balanced woman neither hastes nor rests, but avails herself of all the material at hand."

THE MODEL GUEST

We love the guest who finds our home
A pleasant place to stay;
And yet who knows without a hint
The time to go away.

That guest is always welcome who
By instinct seems to know
Which of our towels are meant for use
And which are meant for show!

THE WORD JINRICKISHA

The Japanese word for the little two-wheeled conveyance which is in common use in Japan—the jinrikisha—is composed of the words "jin," meaning "man"; "riki,," meaning "power," and "sha," meaning "wheel." Hence, a "man-power-carriage."

Every position in life, great or small, can be made as great or as little as we desire to make it.—Dean Stanley.

TIPPING THE SCALE

A business man a short time ago advertised for a young man to fill an important position in his office where character, energy and push would tell.

He was fairly deluged with applications, but finally sifted them down, until it became a choice between two who seemed to have equally good qualifications and experience; both had good recommendations; both seemed smart and clever.

What finally tipped the scale in the favor of the one who got the position was that he was an active Sunday school worker.

The business man wanted a man on whom he would be able to rely.

He was looking for energy, and for willing and hearty service. He rightly judged that a young man, who, amidst the thousand and one distractions of a great city, gave himself up to such work as the Sunday school offers, and put his whole heart into it, had the character and vim which he was looking for.

And so the scale tipped this young man's way.—Exchange.

MY COMRADE CANOE

True comrade, we have tasted life together;
With the wild joy at heart have slipped the tether
To follow, follow, to strange wildernesses
The frank enticement of the wind and weather.

Joy of the quivering pole, the thrilling sinew,
When mad black rapids shook the soul within you,
As climbing toward the lakes of inland silence
I laughed to see the fanged rocks strain to win you.

Joy of the moonlight on the quiet reaches
Where loitering we caught the word that teaches
The poise of Godhead to the questing spirit,
The urge of spring-time to the budding beeches.

When through the dusk the serried clouds were massing,
Where some lost lake among the hills was glassing
The stormy fire above the western spruces,
The looming moose would wonder at our passing.

Then, when the outland voices ceased to hold us,
When winds would tell no more what once they told us,
We dreamed how far away a little village
Lay waiting with its welcome to infold us.

—William Carman Roberts.

One day a little nine-year-old boy was busy studying his geography lesson. He looked up and said, "Mother, is Rhode Island a State or a city?" And before his mother could explain, her little girl of four years said, "Why, it's a chicken."—The Junior Christian Endeavor World.

BANANA CLOTH

There is not a village in India that has not its clump of banana trees, and not a village in which the fruit is not gathered and the fiber in the stalk wasted. It has been left to the Chinese to teach us how the tons of banana fiber thrown on the rubbish heap every year can be converted into banana cloth and sold at a most remunerative price. The process of manufacture is very simple and quite within the reach of the natives of India, particularly those—and there are thousands of them—who have had some little textile training in cotton or jute mills. One-year-old plants are selected and the stalk unrolled and steamed over cauldrons of boiling water till soft. It is a simple matter to remove the green outer skin by passing strips of the stalk through an instrument provided with two blunt blades, which act as scrapers. The fiber thus obtained is placed in cloth and pounded, in order to drive out excess moisture, and is next cleaned and twisted into yarn for weaving. Banana cloth is said to be eminently suitable for tropical wear, and is very durable. At present, the price would seem to be almost prohibitive, as a roll of banana cloth, five yards long and one yard wide, sells for about five dollars and seventy cents. As this enterprise is a new one, high prices are to be expected, but they are sure to right themselves as the demand for this kind of cloth grows, and the supply endeavors to keep pace with it.—Scientific American.

PAPYRUS CULTIVATION

Centuries ago, a water plant known as "papyrus" grew in abundance along the River Nile. The ancient Egyptians cut out the pith of the papyrus, soaked it in water, and pressed it into a smooth material, upon which they wrote. Today steps are being taken to re-establish the cultivation of papyrus, which would make a more durable paper than that made from wood fiber. The cultivation of papyrus would cost a great deal at the start, but it is almost certain that the expense would be justified by the results.—Wellspring.

The cat is about the same the world over with the exception of varying degrees of fur and tail, and the names by which it is called in various lands are quite similar. For instance, in Latin it is catus; in Greek, kattos; in German, katze; in French, chat or caligata; in Italian, gatto; in Spanish, koteli; in old Prussian, catto; in Finnish, katti; in Turkish, quadi; in Arabian, qitt; in Hindustani, katas; in Icelandic, kottr; in Swedish, katt.—Selected.

Scientists have come to the conclusion that bats use the sense of hearing instead of the sense of sight to aid them in procuring their food. All insects while flying produce a musical tone by the vibration of their wings. That produced by mosquitoes and other favorite foods of the bat is above C natural.

There are many kinds of bears in the United States. Contrary to the usual impression, they are not very dangerous. They eat berries, insects and tender branches in preference to men and animals. Young bears grow very rapidly. The cubs are about the size of kittens at birth, and are nearly full grown at the age of seven months.
